ORDER OF THE KNIGHTS OF THE GOLDEN HORSESHOE REVIVED.

The order of the "Knights of the Golden Horseshoe," founded in 1716 by the Colonial Governor Alexander Spotswood of Virginia, has been revived by the State of Virginia. This event is of interest to this city, because Baltimoreans are among the members.

It was just 200 years ago that Gov. Spotswood, in his official capacity, issued an order for the formation of the "Knights of the Golden Horseshoe." The event took place on the 3rd of August, 1716. The order was to be an exclusive one, open only to those who had been active in the military service of the colony.

In 1719, the order was reorganized, and the new organization was expanded to include all officers of the military who had served in the colony. The order was to be a society for the promotion of military education and to encourage the study of military tactics.

The original members of the order were to wear a gold horseshoe as a symbol of their membership. The horseshoe was to be made of gold and was to be worn on the chest, with the point of the horseshoe pointing downward.

The order was to be an exclusive one, open only to those who had served in the military. The members were to be chosen by the governor and the council of the colony. The governor was to be the grand master, and the council was to be the grand lodge.

The order was to be a society for the promotion of military education and to encourage the study of military tactics. The members were to be required to attend regular meetings and to participate in military exercises. The order was to be a "fraternal order," and the members were to be required to support each other in times of need.

The order was to be an exclusive one, open only to those who had served in the military. The members were to be chosen by the governor and the council of the colony. The governor was to be the grand master, and the council was to be the grand lodge.

The order was to be a society for the promotion of military education and to encourage the study of military tactics. The members were to be required to attend regular meetings and to participate in military exercises. The order was to be a "fraternal order," and the members were to be required to support each other in times of need.

The order was to be an exclusive one, open only to those who had served in the military. The members were to be chosen by the governor and the council of the colony. The governor was to be the grand master, and the council was to be the grand lodge.

The order was to be a society for the promotion of military education and to encourage the study of military tactics. The members were to be required to attend regular meetings and to participate in military exercises. The order was to be a "fraternal order," and the members were to be required to support each other in times of need.

The order was to be an exclusive one, open only to those who had served in the military. The members were to be chosen by the governor and the council of the colony. The governor was to be the grand master, and the council was to be the grand lodge.

The order was to be a society for the promotion of military education and to encourage the study of military tactics. The members were to be required to attend regular meetings and to participate in military exercises. The order was to be a "fraternal order," and the members were to be required to support each other in times of need.

The order was to be an exclusive one, open only to those who had served in the military. The members were to be chosen by the governor and the council of the colony. The governor was to be the grand master, and the council was to be the grand lodge.

The order was to be a society for the promotion of military education and to encourage the study of military tactics. The members were to be required to attend regular meetings and to participate in military exercises. The order was to be a "fraternal order," and the members were to be required to support each other in times of need.

The order was to be an exclusive one, open only to those who had served in the military. The members were to be chosen by the governor and the council of the colony. The governor was to be the grand master, and the council was to be the grand lodge.

The order was to be a society for the promotion of military education and to encourage the study of military tactics. The members were to be required to attend regular meetings and to participate in military exercises. The order was to be a "fraternal order," and the members were to be required to support each other in times of need.

The officers of the Knights of the Golden Horseshoe were as follows, on the 15th of June, 1910, at the Octavia, the residence of Dr. Joseph C., Bolling, no. 110 on the right, and the residence of Dr. Joseph B., Bolling, no. 110 on the left. The purpose of this meeting was to elect the officers of the society, and the following were elected:

On this date, the society held its first meeting, and the officers were elected as follows:

The society held its first meeting, and the officers were elected as follows:

On this date, the society held its first meeting, and the officers were elected as follows:

The society held its first meeting, and the officers were elected as follows:

On this date, the society held its first meeting, and the officers were elected as follows:

The society held its first meeting, and the officers were elected as follows:

On this date, the society held its first meeting, and the officers were elected as follows:

The society held its first meeting, and the officers were elected as follows:

On this date, the society held its first meeting, and the officers were elected as follows: