was an event - he would not return. In 1863, our family moved to his property, which had been abandoned during the Civil War. My grandfather, who had fought for the Union Army, was the only male in our family who survived the conflict. My mother's family, who were farmers, were also affected by the war, and the land was left fallow for several years. The war had a profound impact on our family and the community around us.
